

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

J.E.F.M., a minor, by and through his Next Friend, Bob Ekblad; J.F.M., a minor, by and through his Next Friend, Bob Ekblad; D.G.F.M., a minor, by and through her Next Friend, Bob Ekblad; F.L.B., a minor, by and through his Next Friend, Casey Trupin; G.D.S., a minor, by and through his mother and Next Friend, Ana Maria Ruvalcaba; M.A.M., a minor, by and through his mother and Next Friend, Rosa Pedro; S.R.I.C., a minor, by and through his father and Next Friend, Hector Rolando Ixcoy; G.M.G.C., a minor, by and through her father and Next Friend, Juan Guerrero Diaz; on behalf of themselves as individuals and on behalf of others similarly situated,

Plaintiffs-Petitioners,

v.

Eric H. HOLDER, Attorney General, United States; Juan P. OSUNA, Director, Executive Office for Immigration Review; Jeh C. JOHNSON, Secretary, Homeland Security; Thomas S. WINKOWSKI, Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement; Nathalie R. ASHER, Field Office Director, ICE ERO; Kenneth HAMILTON, AAFOD, ERO; Sylvia M. BURWELL, Secretary, Health and Human Services; Eskinder NEGASH, Director, Office of Refugee Resettlement,

Defendants-Respondents.

Case No. _____

MOTION FOR CLASS CERTIFICATION

NOTE ON MOTION CALENDAR:

August 1, 2014

ORAL ARGUMENT REQUESTED

I. MOTION AND PROPOSED CLASS DEFINITION

Plaintiffs-Petitioners (“Plaintiffs”) bring this action to challenge Defendants-Respondents’ (“Defendants”) unlawful policy and practice of subjecting children to immigration proceedings without providing them with legal representation. Plaintiffs contend that federal statutory and constitutional law requires that children be represented in immigration proceedings—adversarial hearings conducted before an Immigration Judge where the Government is represented by a trained attorney who argues for the child’s deportation under a complex set of legal rules. The stakes in these proceedings are extremely high. Judges routinely order children deported to countries where they have little or no family or community support, and in many cases to countries from which they fled in order to escape persecution, torture, or death.

Against this backdrop, this case presents a question of law that is paradigmatically appropriate for class treatment: are children entitled to legal representation at their immigration hearings? Plaintiffs believe the answer is yes, but whether or not the Court ultimately agrees, the question can plainly be resolved on a class-wide basis, making certification appropriate. Pursuant to Rules 23(a) and 23(b)(2) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Plaintiffs respectfully move this Court to certify the following class with all named Plaintiffs being appointed class representatives:

All individuals under the age of eighteen (18) who are or will be in immigration proceedings on or after July 9, 2014 without legal representation in those proceedings.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Plaintiffs define “immigration proceedings” as any proceeding that occurs before an Immigration Judge or the Board of Immigration Appeals. Plaintiffs define “legal representation” as “(1) an attorney, (2) a law student or law graduate directly supervised by a retained attorney, or (3) an accredited representative, all as defined in 8 C.F.R. § 1292.1.” Franco-Gonzales, et al. v. Holder, 828 F. Supp. 2d 1133, 1147 (C.D. Cal. 2011).

1 Plaintiffs seek certification of this class in order to obtain declaratory and injunctive relief, requiring
2 that Defendants provide legal representation to Plaintiffs and all other children in their immigration
3 proceedings.

4 II. BACKGROUND

6 A. Plaintiffs' Legal Claims

7 Although the Court need not engage in "an in-depth examination of the underlying merits" at 8 this stage, Ellis v. Costco Wholesale Corp., 657 F.3d 970, 983 n.8 (9th Cir. 2011), the Court may 9 have to analyze the merits to some extent in order to determine the propriety of class certification.
10 Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 2551-52 (2011) (internal citations omitted). For that 11 reason, Plaintiffs provide a brief summary of their merits claims here.

13 Plaintiffs are all children who face immigration proceedings without counsel. They challenge
14 the Government's failure to provide them with legal representation under the immigration laws and 15 the Fifth Amendment.

17 Plaintiffs' statutory claim arises from the immigration laws' requirement that all deportation
18 hearings be fair. The Immigration and Nationality Act ("INA") and immigration regulations 19 establish that all individuals in removal proceedings must be advised of the charges against them, see
20 8 U.S.C. § 1229(a)(1), 8 C.F.R. § 239.1, and be afforded a reasonable opportunity to, inter alia, 21 examine and present evidence and witnesses, see 8 U.S.C. § 1229a(b)(4)(B); 8 C.F.R.
22 § 1240.10(a)(4). The Board of Immigration Appeals ("BIA") and the federal courts have read these 23 provisions to require that all individuals in immigration proceedings be provided a fair hearing. See,
24 e.g., Matter of Exilus, 18 I. & N. Dec. 276, 278-79 (BIA 1982); Oshodi v. Holder, 729 F.3d 883, 889
25 (9th Cir. 2013) (en banc).

1 Plaintiffs assert that, because children “as a class,” “lack the capacity to exercise mature
2 judgment and possess only an incomplete ability to understand the world around them,” J.D.B. v.
3 North Carolina, 131 S. Ct. 2394, 2403 (2011) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted), they
4 cannot obtain the fair hearing to which the statute entitles them without legal representation, 5 particularly given the “the labyrinthine character of modern immigration law” and its “maze of 6 hyper-technical statutes and regulations.” Drax v. Reno, 338 F.3d 98, 99 (2d Cir. 2003).

8 Plaintiffs’ constitutional claim follows from two lines of doctrine. First, the Supreme Court 9 held nearly 40 years ago that children facing juvenile delinquency proceedings have a right to 10 appointed counsel. See In re Gault, 387 U.S. 1, 34-41 (1967). Subsequent caselaw concerning the 11 right to appointed counsel in non-criminal cases also supports Plaintiffs’ position here. See Turner v.
12 Rogers, 131 S. Ct. 2507 (2011) (finding no categorical right to appointed counsel in straightforward 13 civil contempt proceedings where state was unrepresented and use of standardized forms could 14 permit fair adjudication in most cases).

16 Second, Due Process doctrine in the deportation context strongly suggests that all children
17 facing immigration proceedings must be represented. The Supreme Court held over 100 years ago
18 that deportation hearings must satisfy the Fifth Amendment’s Due Process Clause, see Yamataya v.
19 Fisher, 189 U.S. 86, 100-01 (1903); and it has reiterated that holding specifically in the context of 20 children. See Reno v. Flores, 507 U.S. 292, 306 (1993). Courts have recognized that appointed 21 counsel may be required to satisfy that constitutional requirement in at least some removal cases,
22 including those involving children. See, e.g., Aguilera-Enriquez v. INS, 516 F.2d 565, 568 n.3 (6th
23 Cir. 1975) (“Where an unrepresented indigent alien would require counsel to present his position
24 adequately to an immigration judge, he must be provided with a lawyer at the Government’s
25 expense. Otherwise ‘fundamental fairness’ would be violated.”); cf. Jie Lin v. Ashcroft, 377 F.3d
26

1 1014, 1032-34 (9th Cir. 2004) (emphasizing the crucial importance of the right to effective
2 assistance of counsel in order for a minor to have a full and fair hearing in immigration court).

3 That immigration cases are civil rather than criminal does not obviate the need for counsel in 4 deportation cases involving children. Gault itself involved civil proceedings, but it eschewed any
5 formalistic reliance on that distinction. Moreover, as the Third Circuit has explained, “[a]s a matter
6 of formal constitutional doctrine, the Sixth Amendment right to (effective) counsel does not apply in
7 a civil context such as immigration proceedings. Nevertheless, we cannot treat immigration
8 proceedings like everyday civil proceedings, despite their formally civil character, because unlike in 9 everyday civil proceedings, the liberty of an individual is at stake in deportation proceedings.”
10 Fadiga v. Attorney Gen. U.S., 488 F.3d 142, 157 n.23 (3d Cir. 2007) (internal quotation marks and 11 citations omitted).
12
13

14 B. Named Plaintiffs’ Factual Backgrounds

15 Plaintiff J.E.F.M. is a 10-year-old boy from El Salvador. In 2013, J.E.F.M. and his two 16 siblings fled their grandmother’s home in El Salvador after gang members began to target them.
17 Their parents, both Christian pastors, had previously been persecuted by gang members for their 18 efforts to rehabilitate former gang members; their father was murdered and their mother forced to 19 flee the country as a result. Customs and Border Protection (“CBP”) took J.E.F.M. and his siblings
20 into custody after they entered the United States in 2013, when he was only nine years old. He is 21 scheduled to appear before an Immigration Judge in Seattle, Washington in September 2014 to 22 answer to the charges of removability and to assert any defenses against his removal to El Salvador.
23
24 See Ex. A, J.E.F.M. Notice to Appear.
25
26
27
28

1 Plaintiff J.F.M. is a 13-year-old boy from El Salvador and the brother of J.E.F.M. He fled El
2 Salvador at the same time and for the same reasons as his brother. He is also scheduled for an
3 immigration proceeding in September 2014. See Ex. B, J.F.M. Notice to Appear.

4 Plaintiff D.G.F.M. is a 15-year-old girl from El Salvador, and the sister of J.E.F.M. and 5 J.F.M. She fled at the same time and for the same reasons as her brothers. She too is scheduled for 6 immigration proceedings in September 2014. See Ex. C, D.G.F.M. Notice to Appear.

8 Plaintiff F.L.B. is a 15-year-old boy from Guatemala. CBP took him into custody after he 9 entered the United States in 2013, when he was only 14 years old. He had been abused and left to 10 fend for himself by his parents and was living on his own when he decided to seek a safer life and 11 made the difficult journey to the United States by himself. He is scheduled to appear before an 12 Immigration Judge in Seattle, Washington in September 2014 to answer to the charges of 13 removability and to assert any defenses against his removal to Guatemala. See Ex. D, F.L.B. Notice
14 to Appear.

16 Plaintiff G.D.S. is a 16-year-old boy from Mexico. He has lived with his family in the United 17 States since he was about one year old. He, his mother, and his older brother successfully applied for 18 U nonimmigrant visa status and are currently seeking to adjust their status to become lawful 19 permanent residents. However, he is now in a juvenile rehabilitation facility after having been 20 adjudicated delinquent in juvenile court. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) issued a 21 detainer against him advising that he faces removal proceedings. In proceedings, ICE will seek to 22 strip him of his lawful status and remove him from the only country he has ever known, which could 23 permanently separate him from his mother and siblings. See Ex. E, G.D.S. Detainer.

26 Plaintiff M.A.M. is a 16-year-old boy from Honduras. There, his maternal grandmother
27 raised him from a young age. When she grew elderly and fell ill, M.A.M. came to the United States.

1 He was only eight years old at that time and has lived in the United States ever since. ICE took him
2 into custody in September 2011, subsequently returning him to his mother's care. M.A.M. is 3 scheduled to appear before an Immigration Judge in Los Angeles, California in August 2014 to 4 answer to the charges of removability and to assert any defenses against his removal to Honduras.
5 See Ex. F, M.A.M. Notice to Appear.

6
7 Plaintiff S.R.I.C. is a 17-year-old boy from Guatemala. In February 2014, he was forced to 8 leave his home after receiving threats from gang members because he refused their recruitment
9 efforts. S.R.I.C. was apprehended by CBP after entering the United States. He was eventually 10 released to his father, who is a lawful permanent resident. S.R.I.C. is scheduled to appear before an 11 Immigration Judge in Los Angeles, California in January 2015 to answer to the charges of 12 removability and to assert any defenses against his removal to Honduras. See Ex. G, S.R.I.C. Notice
13 to Appear.

14
15 Plaintiff G.M.G.C. is a 14-year-old girl from El Salvador. In January 2014, G.M.G.C. fled
16 her grandparents' home in El Salvador after gang members targeted the young women in her family.
17 She traveled to the United States with her sisters and young aunt and was apprehended by CBP after 18 crossing into the United States. She was eventually released into the custody of her father, who has 19 Temporary Protected Status, in Los Angeles, California. G.M.G.C. is scheduled to appear before an 20 Immigration Judge in Harlingen, Texas in September 2014 to answer to the charges of removability 21 and to assert any defenses against her removal to El Salvador. See Ex. H, G.M.G.C. Notice to 22 Appear.

III. THE COURT SHOULD CERTIFY A CLASS TO RESOLVE PLAINTIFFS' CLAIMS

Plaintiffs seek certification under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b)(2).<sup>2</sup> Both the Ninth Circuit and this Court routinely order the certification of class actions based on claims challenging the adequacy of procedural protections under the immigration laws. See, e.g., Rodriguez v. Hayes, 591 F.3d 1105 (9th Cir. 2010) (reversing district court order denying class certification for class of immigration detainees subject to prolonged detention); Khoury v. Asher, --F. Supp. 2d--, 2014 WL 954920 (W.D. Wash. 2014) (certifying class and ordering declaratory relief for immigration detainees).<sup>3</sup> That courts routinely certify classes in this area under Rule 23(b)(2) is unsurprising for <sup>2</sup> In the alternative, Plaintiffs-Petitioners seek certification of a representative habeas corpus action under procedures analogous to those available under Rule 23. It is well established that, in appropriate circumstances, a habeas corpus petition may proceed on a representative or class-wide basis. See, e.g., U.S. Parole Comm'n v. Geraghty, 445 U.S. 388, 393, 404 (1980) (holding that class representative could appeal denial of nationwide class certification of habeas and declaratory judgment claims); Rodriguez v. Hayes, 591 F.3d 1105, 1117 (9th Cir. 2010) (“[T]he Ninth Circuit has recognized that class actions may be brought pursuant to habeas corpus.”)(citations omitted). Plaintiffs-Petitioners are in the custody of the federal Government by virtue of the immigration charges to which they must respond in court. See generally Jones v. Cunningham, 371 U.S. 236, 240 (1963).

<sup>3</sup> For other Ninth Circuit cases in the immigration context, see Gete v. INS, 121 F.3d 1285, 1300 (9th Cir. 1997) (vacating district court’s denial of class certification in case challenging inadequate notice and standards in Immigration and Naturalization Service (“INS”) vehicle forfeiture procedure); Walters v. Reno, No. C94-1204C, 1996 WL 897662, at *5-8 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 13, 1996) (certifying nationwide class of individuals challenging adequacy of notice in document fraud cases), aff’d, 145 F.3d 1032 (9th Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1003 (1999); Gorbach v. Reno, 181 F.R.D. 642, 644 (W.D. Wash. 1998) (certifying nationwide class of persons challenging validity of administrative denaturalization proceedings), aff’d on other grounds, 219 F.3d 1087 (9th Cir. 2000) (en banc). For other cases from the Western District of Washington, see Roshandel v. Chertoff, 554 F. Supp. 2d 1194 (W.D. Wash. 2008) (certifying district-wide class of delayed naturalization cases); Gonzales v. U.S. Dep’t. of Homeland Sec., 239 F.R.D. 620, 629 (W.D. Wash. 2006) (certifying Ninth Circuit wide class challenging USCIS policy contradicting binding precedent), preliminary injunction vacated, 508 F.3d 1227 (9th Cir. 2007) (establishing new rule and vacating preliminary injunction but no challenge made to class certification); Ali v. Ashcroft, 213 F.R.D. 390, 409-10 (W.D. Wash. 2003), aff’d, 346 F.3d 873, 889 (9th Cir. 2003), vacated on other grounds, 421 F.3d 795 (9th Cir. 2005) (certifying nationwide class of Somalis challenging legality of removal to Somalia in the absence of a functioning government). For another case involving the right to appointed legal representation in the immigration process, see Franco-Gonzales v. Napolitano, CV 10-02211 DMG (DTBx), 2011 WL 11705815 (C.D. Cal. 2011) (certifying class of immigrants detained in Washington, California, and Arizona who face immigration proceedings without appointed counsel even though they suffer from a serious mental disorder or defect). For another involving the rights of immigrant children facing deportation, see Perez-Funez v. District Director, INS, 611 F. Supp. 990, 994-1001 (C.D. Cal. 1984) (certifying nationwide class of unaccompanied immigrant minors in INS custody challenging implementation of its voluntary departure procedure).

1 at least three reasons. First, the rule was intended to “facilitate the bringing of class actions in the 2 civil-rights area,” 7AA WRIGHT & MILLER, FEDERAL PRACTICE & PROCEDURE § 1775, at 71 (3d ed.
3 2005), particularly those seeking declaratory or injunctive relief. Second, they often involve claims
4 on behalf of class members who would not have the ability to present their claims absent class
5 treatment. That rationale applies with particular force to civil rights suits like this one, where 6 children are extremely unlikely to be able even to raise, let alone to litigate, the claim at issue here
7 on their own. See Rodriguez, 591 F.3d at 1123. Finally, the core issues in these cases often involve
8 questions of law, rather than disparate questions of fact, and therefore are well suited for resolution
9 on a class-wide basis. See, e.g., Unthaksinkun v. Porter, CASE NO. C11-0588JLR, 2011 U.S. Dist.
10 LEXIS 111099, at *38 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 28, 2011) (finding that, because all class members were 11 subject to the same process, the court’s ruling as to the legal sufficiency of the process would apply 12 to all).

13
14
15 Plaintiffs do not ask this Court to adjudicate their individual immigration cases. Nor do they 16 seek money damages. Rather, Plaintiffs ask only that the Court determine whether Defendants’
17 policy and practice is unlawful, and, if so, order Defendants to implement the procedures necessary
18 to protect Plaintiffs and proposed class members.
19

20 A. This Action Satisfies the Class Certification Requirements of Federal Rule of Civil 21 Procedure 23(a).

22 1. The Proposed Class Members Are so Numerous That Joinder Is Impracticable.

23 Rule 23(a)(1) requires that the class be “so numerous that joinder of all members is 24 impracticable.” “[I]mpracticability’ does not mean ‘impossibility,’ but only the difficulty or 25 inconvenience of joining all members of the class.” Harris v. Palm Springs Alpine Est., Inc., 329
26 F.2d 909, 913-14 (9th Cir. 1964) (citation omitted). No fixed number of class members is required.
27
28 Perez-Funez v. District Director, Immigration & Naturalization Service, 611 F. Supp. 990, 995

1 (C.D. Cal. 1984); Hum v. Dericks, 162 F.R.D. 628, 634 (D. Haw. 1995) (“There is no magic number
2 for determining when too many parties make joinder impracticable. Courts have certified classes
3 with as few as thirteen members, and have denied certification of classes with over three hundred 4 members.”) (citations omitted).

5
6 The Government’s own data and announcements make clear that the putative class is far too
7 numerous to make joinder practicable. First, according to data received by Plaintiffs’ counsel from 8 Defendant Executive Office for Immigration Review’s (“EOIR”) Office of Legislative and Public
9 Affairs, there were at least 2,959 completed proceedings with unrepresented minor respondents in 10 immigration courts throughout the country in Fiscal Year 2013.<sup>4</sup> Recognizing that many cases take 11 more than one year to complete and that the number of children has increased since 2013, that figure 12 likely underestimates the size of the class. Second, the Government recently announced that 13 approximately 10,000 unaccompanied children are likely to appear in 29 immigration courts in 14 Fiscal Year 2015. Although some of these children will find attorneys and therefore not fall within 15 the putative class, current representation rates suggest that at least several thousand children will
16 remain unrepresented.<sup>5</sup> Furthermore, several groups of children were excluded from the estimate—
17
18
19
20
21
22

---

23 <sup>4</sup> See Ex. I.A., Macleod-Ball Decl., at 55. The data obtained does not measure the number of children who 24 appeared before immigration courts, but rather the number of certain types of “completions,” or Immigration
25 Judge determinations. More than one completion can occur over the course of an individual’s immigration
26 proceedings. See Department of Justice, EOIR FY2013 Statistical Yearbook (2014), Glossary of Terms at 27 4, <http://www.justice.gov/eoir/statpub/fy13syb.pdf>.

28 <sup>5</sup> Current estimates suggest that a majority of children in immigration proceedings are unrepresented and that the number of children fleeing to the United States is rapidly increasing. See Center for Gender and Refugee Studies & Kids in Need of Defense, A Treacherous Journey: Child Migrants Navigating the U.S. Immigration System at ii-iv, 2 (Feb. 2014), available at http://www.uchastings.edu/centers/cgrs-docs/treacherous\_journey\_cgrs\_kind\_report.pdf.

1 including all children whose cases will be heard in the busy Los Angeles, California, Houston,
2 Texas, and Harlingen, Texas immigration courts.<sup>6</sup>

3 The attached declarations filed by several attorneys who work as legal service providers for 4 children facing deportation confirm that the class is numerous. See Exs. J, Stotland Decl.; K, Herrera
5 Decl.; L, Sharp. Decl.; M, Contreras Decl. Of course, these declarations come from organizations
6 that interact with only a small sample of children in immigration proceedings around the country.
7 Therefore, this Court can reasonably assume that the numbers in these declarations reflect only a
8 small portion of the total number of putative class members. See Ali, 213 F.R.D. at 408 (noting that 9 “the Court does not need to know the exact size of the putative class, ‘so long as general knowledge
10 and common sense indicate that it is large’”) (quoting Perez-Funez, 611 F. Supp. at 995); Newberg
11 on Class Actions § 3:13 (noting that “it is well settled that a plaintiff need not allege the exact 12 number or specific identity of proposed class members”).<sup>7</sup>

---

16 <sup>6</sup> See Announcement of Federal Funding Opportunity, Corporation for National and Community Service, 17 2014 justice AmeriCorps Legal Services for Unaccompanied Children (Jun. 6, 2014), available at 18 <http://www.nationalservice.gov/sites/default/files/upload/JusticeAmeriCorpsNOFO.pdf>. The estimate
19 appeared in conjunction with the Government’s plan to fund 100 attorneys and paralegals to represent certain 20 children in immigration proceedings. Based on the text of the relevant announcements, it appears that the 21 Government funded representatives will not be permitted to take on representation of children who are 16 or 22 17 years old, children who are in proceedings with their parents, or children who are in the custody of the 23 Office of Refugee Resettlement (“ORR”) or the Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”). Id. at 3. It is 24 unclear if children who are 16 or 17 were included in the estimated number of children likely to appear in 25 immigration court in Fiscal Year 2015.

26 <sup>7</sup> Joinder is also inherently impractical because of the unnamed, unknown future class members who will be
27 subjected to Defendants’ unlawful policy and practices. Ali, 213 F.R.D. at 408-09 (“[W]here the class
28 includes unnamed, unknown future members, joinder of such unknown individuals is impracticable and the 29 numerosity requirement is therefore met, regardless of class size.”) (citations omitted). Other factors
30 demonstrating the impracticability of joinder in this case include the geographic dispersion of putative class
31 members and their inability, by virtue of their lack of representation, to pursue their claims individually. See,
32 e.g., Wong Yang Sung v. McGrath, 339 U.S. 33, 46 (1950) (“[I]n . . . deportation proceeding[s], . . . we 33 frequently meet with a voteless class of litigants who not only lack the influence of citizens, but who are 34 strangers to the laws and customs in which they find themselves involved and . . . often do not even 35 understand the tongue in which they are accused.”), superseded by statute on other grounds as explained in 36 Hashim v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv., 936 F.2d 711, 713 (2d Cir. 1991); United States ex rel.
37 Morgan v. Sielaff, 546 F.2d 218, 222 (7th Cir. 1976) (“Only a representative proceeding avoids a multiplicity

1 In any event, Plaintiffs are unaware of any case finding a proposed class of this size
2 insufficiently numerous. There should be no serious dispute that the class is “so numerous that
3 joinder of all members is impracticable.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a).

4 2. The Class Presents Common Questions of Law and Fact.

5 Rule 23(a)(2) requires that there be questions of law or fact common to the class. To satisfy
6 the commonality requirement, “[a]ll questions of fact and law need not be common.” Ellis, 657
7 F.3d at 981 (quoting Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., 150 F.3d 1011, 1019 (9th Cir. 1998)). Rather, one
8 shared legal issue can be sufficient. See, e.g., Walters v. Reno, 145 F.3d 1032, 1046 (9th Cir. 1998)
9 (“What makes the plaintiffs’ claims suitable for a class action is the common allegation that the
10 INS’s procedures provide insufficient notice.”); Rodriguez, 591 F.3d at 1122 (“[T]he commonality 11 requirements asks us to look only for some shared legal issue or a common core of facts.”).

12 “Commonality requires the plaintiff to demonstrate that the class members ‘have suffered the 13 same injury.’” Wal-Mart, 131 S. Ct. at 2551 (citation omitted). In determining that a common 14 question of law exists, the putative class members’ claims “must depend upon a common 15 contention” that is “of such a nature that it is capable of classwide resolution—which means that 16 determination of its truth or falsity will resolve an issue that is central to the validity of each one of 17 the claims in one stroke.” Id. Thus, “[w]hat matters to class certification . . . is not the raising of 18 common ‘questions’ . . . but, rather the capacity of a class wide proceeding to generate common
19 answers apt to drive the resolution of the litigation.” Id. (internal quotation marks and citation 20 omitted) (first ellipses in original).

21 The commonality standard is even more liberal in a civil rights suit such as this one, in which 22

23
24
25
26
27
28

---

of lawsuits and guarantees a hearing for individuals . . . who by reason of ignorance, poverty, illness or lack of counsel may not have been in a position to seek one on their own behalf.”) (citation omitted).

1 “the lawsuit challenges a system-wide practice or policy that affects all of the putative class
2 members.” Armstrong v. Davis, 275 F.3d 849, 868 (9th Cir. 2001), abrogated on other grounds by
3 Johnson v. California, 543 U.S. 499, 504-05 (2005). “[C]lass suits for injunctive or declaratory
4 relief” like this case, “by their very nature often present common questions satisfying Rule 23(a)(2).”
5 7A WRIGHT, MILLER & KANE, FEDERAL PRACTICE & PROCEDURE § 1763 at 226.

6
7 Here, Plaintiffs and the proposed class members—all under the age of 18—allege the same
8 injury caused by the uniform policy and practice of Defendants: denying them appointed legal 9 representation in their immigration proceedings. Every Plaintiff and putative class member has been 10 or will be forced to appear without legal representation in front of an Immigration Judge—whether 11 at the trial or appellate level—and will have to litigate against a trained Government attorney. All of 12 the putative class members make the same legal claim: that by virtue of their age and its attendant
13 limitations it is unlawful to force them to appear in such proceedings without legal representation.
14 Thus, the question whether the immigration laws and the Constitution permit the Government to 15 force children to appear in immigration proceedings without legal representation is common to all
16 class members. Should Plaintiffs prevail, all who fall within the class will benefit; they will all be 17 entitled to legal representation in their immigration proceedings. Thus, a common answer as to the 18 legality of the challenged policy and practice will “drive the resolution of the litigation.” Ellis, 657
19 F.3d at 981 (quoting Wal-Mart, 131 S. Ct. at 2551).

20
21
22 The Supreme Court has recognized that a child’s age “generates commonsense conclusions
23 about behavior and perception” that “apply broadly to children as a class.” J.D.B., 131 S. Ct. at 2403
24 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted) (emphasis added). These conclusions “are self-
25 evident to anyone who was a child once himself, including any police officer or judge.” Id. As a 26 consequence, “[t]he law has historically reflected the same assumption that children
27
28

1 characteristically lack the capacity to exercise mature judgment and possess only an incomplete
2 ability to understand the world around them.” Id.; see also Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 U.S. 104, 115-
3 16 (1982) (“Our history is replete with laws and judicial recognition that minors, especially in their
4 earlier years, generally are less mature and responsible than adults.”).

5 Children as a class have lesser emotional and cognitive capacities, and therefore are uniquely 6 unable to represent themselves in immigration proceedings. “Although citation to social science and 7 cognitive science authorities is unnecessary to establish these commonsense propositions, the 8 literature confirms what experience bears out.” J.D.B., 131 S. Ct. at 2403 n.5. “[D]evelopments in 9 psychology and brain science continue to show fundamental differences between juvenile and adult
10 minds.” Graham v. Florida, 560 U.S. 48, 68 (2010). These differences include a reduced ability to 11 understand consequences, make informed judgments, and resist coercion—competencies that are all
12 crucial to the ability to represent oneself in complex legal proceedings. See Dustin Albert &
13 Laurence Steinberg, Judgment and Decision Making in Adolescence, 21 J. Research on Adolescence 14 211, 220 (2011) (noting that “[a]dults tend to make more adaptive decisions than adolescents,” in 15 part because “they have a more mature capacity to resist the pull of social and emotional influences
16 and remain focused on long-term goals”). “Describing no one child in particular, these observations 17 restate what ‘any parent knows’—indeed, what any person knows—about children generally.”
18 J.D.B., 131 S. Ct. at 2403 (quoting Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 569 (2005)).

19 While, of course, some children are more capable than others, the Supreme Court has 20 recognized that, as a class, children must receive different legal treatment given their unique 21 characteristics.

22 Like this Court’s own generalizations, the legal disqualifications placed on children as a
23 class—e.g., limitations on their ability to alienate property, enter a binding contract
24 enforceable against them, and marry without parental consent—exhibit the settled
25 understanding that the differentiating characteristics of youth are universal.

1 Id. at 2403-04 (emphasis added). Thus, children—whatever their precise ages and other
2 circumstances—are unified by the disadvantages they encounter when they confront the legal
3 system, which include a comparative lack of ability to engage in the very activities that are necessary
4 to ensure a full and fair hearing of their claims in immigration proceedings. See In re Gault, 387 U.S.
5 at 36 (“The juvenile needs the assistance of counsel to cope with problems of law, to make skilled
6 inquiry into the facts, to insist upon regularity of the proceedings, and to ascertain whether he has a
7 defense and to prepare and submit it. The child requires the guiding hand of counsel at every step in 8 the proceedings against him.”) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted); cf. Graham, 560
9 U.S. at 78 (“[F]eatures that distinguish juveniles from adults also put them at a significant 10 disadvantage in criminal proceedings. Juveniles mistrust adults and have limited understandings of 11 the criminal justice system and the roles of the institutional actors within it.”).

12
13
14
15 In keeping with this widespread legal, social, and scientific consensus, this country’s legal 16 systems frequently use the age of 18 to mark the boundary between childhood and adulthood. See 17 Roper, 543 U.S. at 569 (stating that “almost every State prohibits those under 18 years of age from 18 voting, serving on juries, or marrying without parental consent”); id. at 581-86 (appendices to 19 Court’s opinion cataloguing various state laws on age of voting, jury service, and marriage). Indeed, 20 the categorical separation between individuals younger than 18 and those 18 and older has enjoyed
21 enduring societal support:

22
23 Drawing the line at 18 years of age is subject, of course, to the objections always raised
24 against categorical rules. The qualities that distinguish juveniles from adults do not disappear
25 when an individual turns 18. By the same token, some under 18 have already attained a level
26 of maturity some adults will never reach. For the reasons we have discussed, however, a line
27 must be drawn. . . . The age of 18 is the point where society draws the line for many purposes
28 between childhood and adulthood.

Id. at 574.

1 Notably, the immigration statutes and regulations also acknowledge that children under the 2 age of 18 are, as a class, unified by their diminished ability to assert their rights and defend their
3 interests. For example, 8 C.F.R. § 1240.10(c) prohibits “an unrepresented respondent who is . . .
4 under the age of 18” from conceding removability, unless the child is accompanied by a legal 5 representative, near relative, guardian, or friend.

6
7 The significance of 18 as a dividing line between youth and adulthood recurs in other parts of 8 the statutory and regulatory scheme. An “unaccompanied alien child” is defined as, inter alia, a child
9 under the age of 18. See 6 U.S.C. § 279(g)(2). In light of the shared vulnerabilities of this class of 10 individuals, the statute compels the Government to afford them certain protections. See, e.g., 8
11 U.S.C. § 1232(a)(5)(D) (requiring that unaccompanied immigrant children from noncontiguous
12 countries be placed into removal proceedings under § 1229a); 8 U.S.C. § 1232(d)(8) (commanding
13 Government to promulgate regulations regarding asylum applications by unaccompanied children);
14 see also David L. Neal, Chief Immigration Judge, Operating Policies and Procedures Memorandum
15 07-01: Guidelines for Immigration Court Cases Involving Unaccompanied Alien Children at 3 (May 16 22, 2007), available at <http://www.justice.gov/eoir/eoia/ocij/oppm07/07-01.pdf> (instructing
17 Immigration Judges to employ “child sensitive procedures” for unaccompanied children under 18 in 18 immigration proceedings). The immigration regulations also include special provisions governing 19 the apprehension (including specialized notice of rights), detention, and release from custody of 20 “juveniles,” who are defined as “under the age of 18 years.” 8 C.F.R. § 1236.3(a); see also 8 U.S.C.
21 § 1182(a)(9)(B)(iii)(I) (stating that “[n]o period of time in which an alien is under 18 years of age
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

1 shall be taken into account” when determining whether an immigrant is inadmissible to the United
2 States for having been unlawfully present in this country for certain time periods).<sup>8</sup>

3 This well-settled legal and societal consensus underscores why variations within the Plaintiff
4 Class do not defeat commonality. “Where the circumstances of each particular class member vary,
5 but retain a common core of factual or legal issues with the rest of the class, commonality exists.”
6 Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 688 F.3d 1015, 1029 (9th Cir. 2012) (internal quotation
7 marks and citation omitted); see also Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 701 (1979) (“It is unlikely
8 that differences in the factual background of each claim will affect the outcome of the legal issue.”);
9 Walters, 145 F.3d at 1046 (noting that “it would be ‘a twisted result’ to permit an administrative 10 agency to avoid nationwide litigation” by pointing to minor variations in procedure).

11
12
13 Given the overwhelming authority establishing that children under the age of 18 share certain 14 critical psychological and developmental characteristics, the question whether federal statutory or 15 constitutional law requires legal representation for children in immigration proceedings is plainly 16 “capable of classwide resolution,” as its “truth or falsity will resolve an issue that is central to the 17 validity of each one of the claims in one stroke.” Wal-Mart, 131 S. Ct. at 2551; see also Perez-
18 Funez, 611 F. Supp. at 994-95 (finding that class of “[a]ll persons who claim to be under eighteen
19 years of age” in INS custody satisfied commonality requirement).<sup>9</sup>

20
21
22
23 <sup>8</sup> To be sure, the immigration statutes and regulations sometimes draw other age lines. At times it reaches as 24 high as 21. See, e.g., 8 U.S.C. § 1101(b)(1) (defining “child” as “unmarried person under twenty-one years of 25 age” for purposes of family-based immigration provisions); 8 C.F.R. § 204.11(c)(1) (establishing that 26 noncitizen must be under 21 years of age in order to be eligible for special immigrant status). At others it dips 27 as low as 14. See, e.g., 8 C.F.R. § 103.8(c)(2)(ii) (requiring DHS to serve charging documents upon a minor 28 under 14 years of age by service upon the person with whom minor resides, and “whenever possible,” the minor’s “near relative, guardian, committee, or friend”). This in no way undermines the viability of the class definition in this case. As discussed above, “a line must be drawn,” Roper, 543 U.S. at 574, and the Plaintiff
Class in this case adopts the most commonly accepted line of demarcation between youth and adulthood.

<sup>9</sup> Questions of law are thus particularly well-suited to resolution on a class-wide basis because “the court must decide only once whether the application” of Defendants’ policies and practices “does or does not violate” the
MOT. CLASS CERTIFICATION (No.   ) - 17 of 25

1 For all these reasons, the Plaintiff Class in this case satisfies Rule 23(a)(2).

2 3. The Claims of the Named Plaintiffs Are Typical of the Claims of the Members of 3 the Proposed Class.

4 Rule 23(a)(3) specifies that the claims of the representatives must be “typical of the claims
 5 . . . of the class.” To establish typicality, “a class representative must be part of the class and ‘possess
 6 the same interest and suffer the same injury’ as the class members.” Gen. Tel. Co. of the Southwest
 7 v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 156 (1982) (citation omitted). As with commonality, factual differences
 8 among class members do not defeat typicality provided there are legal questions common to all class
 9 members. La Duke, 762 F.2d at 1332 (“The minor differences in the manner in which the 10 representative’s Fourth Amendment rights were violated does not render their claims atypical of 11 those of the class.”); Smith v. Univ. of Wash. Law Sch., 2 F. Supp. 2d 1324, 1342 (W.D. Wash. 1998)
 12 (“When it is alleged that the same unlawful conduct was directed at or affected both the named
 13 plaintiff and the class sought to be represented, the typicality requirement is usually satisfied, 14 irrespective of varying fact patterns which underlie individual claims.”) (citation omitted).

15
 16
 17 The claims of the named Plaintiffs are typical of the claims of the proposed class. Each
 18 Plaintiff, just like each proposed class member, is an unrepresented child whom the Government has 19 placed into immigration proceedings, subject to its policy and practice of forcing children to face
 20 immigration proceedings without legal representation. Moreover, Plaintiffs share a common injury
 21 with the class they seek to represent. As a result of the Government’s failure to provide legal 22 representation, they are all deprived of full and fair immigration proceedings to determine whether 23

24
 25
 26 law. Troy v. Kehe Food Distributors, Inc., 276 F.R.D. 642, 654 (W.D. Wash. 2011); see also La Duke v.
 27 Nelson, 762 F.2d 1318, 1332 (9th Cir. 1985) (holding that the constitutionality of an INS procedure 28 “[p]lainly” created common questions of law and fact). As such, resolution on a class-wide basis also serves an important purpose behind the commonality doctrine: practical and efficient case management. See
Rodriguez, 591 F.3d at 1122.

1 they may remain in the United States.

2 Because the named Plaintiffs and the proposed class raise common legal claims and are
3 united in their interest and injury, the element of typicality is met.

4 4. The Named Plaintiffs Will Adequately Protect the Interests of the Proposed
5 Class, and Counsel Are Qualified to Litigate this Action.

6 Rule 23(a)(4) requires that “the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the 7 interests of the class.” “Whether the class representatives satisfy the adequacy requirement depends 8 on ‘the qualifications of counsel for the representatives, an absence of antagonism, a sharing of 9 interests between representatives and absentees, and the unlikelihood that the suit is collusive.’”

10 Walters, 145 F.3d at 1046 (citations omitted).

11 a. Named Plaintiffs

12 The named Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the proposed class
13 because they seek relief on behalf of the class as a whole and have no interest antagonistic to other
14 members of the class. Their mutual goal is to declare Defendants’ challenged policies and practices
15 unlawful and to obtain injunctive relief requiring legal representation for those putative class
16 members who otherwise lack it. Thus, the interests of the class representatives are not opposed to 17 those of the proposed class members; to the contrary, they coincide.

18 Moreover, in an action where minor plaintiffs are represented by next friends pursuant to 19 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17, the next friends must be dedicated to the named plaintiffs’ best 20 interests, be familiar with the litigation, understand why the named plaintiffs seek relief, and be 21 willing and able to pursue the case on behalf of the named plaintiffs. Sam M. ex rel. Elliot v.

22 Carciari, 608 F.3d 77, 92 (1st Cir. 2010). The next friends for named Plaintiffs J.E.F.M., J.F.M., 23 D.G.F.M., F.L.B., G.D.S., M.A.M., S.R.I.C., and G.M.G.C., who sue on their behalf, have

24 manifested their understanding that this case is a class action. Each of them is dedicated to the best
25
26
27
28

1 interests not only of these named Plaintiffs, but also to the putative class to whom they would owe a
2 fiduciary duty. Each of the next friends is also familiar with this litigation, understands the need for
3 the relief sought, and is willing and able to pursue this case on behalf of these named Plaintiffs and 4 the class they seek to represent. See Compl. Section IV.D.

5
6 b. Counsel

7 The adequacy of Plaintiffs' counsel is also satisfied here. Counsel are deemed qualified when 8 they can establish their experience in previous class actions and cases involving the same area of 9 law. See Lynch v. Rank, 604 F. Supp. 30, 37 (N.D. Cal. 1984), aff'd, 747 F.2d 528 (9th Cir. 1984),
10 amended on rehearing, 763 F.2d 1098 (9th Cir. 1985); Marcus v. Heckler, 620 F. Supp. 1218, 1223-
11 24 (N.D. Ill. 1985); Adams v. Califano, 474 F. Supp. 974, 979 (D. Md. 1979), aff'd, 609 F.2d 505
12 (4th Cir. 1979).

13
14 Plaintiffs are represented by the Northwest Immigrant Rights Project, ACLU Immigrants'
15 Rights Project, the ACLU of Southern California, the ACLU of Washington, the American 16 Immigration Council, Public Counsel, and the law firm K&L Gates. Counsel are able and 17 experienced in protecting the interests of noncitizens and, among them, have considerable 18 experience in handling complex and class action litigation, including litigation on behalf of 19 immigrants with unique vulnerabilities. See Exs. N, Adams Decl.; O, Arulanantham Decl.; P, Werlin
20 Decl.; Q, Jackson Decl. These attorneys are counsel of record in numerous cases focusing on 21 immigration law that successfully obtained class certification and class relief, including the only
22 prior case ever finding that a class of immigrants was entitled to legal representation. In sum,
23 Plaintiffs' counsel will vigorously represent both the named and absent class members.
24
25
26
27
28

1       B. This Action Satisfies The Requirements of Rule 23(b)(2) of The Federal Rules of Civil
2       Procedure.

3       In addition to satisfying the four requirements of Rule 23(a), Plaintiffs also must meet one of 4       the requirements of Rule 23(b) for a class action to be certified. Class certification under Rule
5       23(b)(2) “requires ‘that the primary relief sought is declaratory or injunctive.’” Rodriguez, 591 F.3d
6       at 1125 (citation omitted). “The rule does not require [the court] to examine the viability or bases of 7       class members’ claims for declaratory and injunctive relief, but only to look at whether class
8       members seek uniform relief from a practice applicable to all of them.” Id. This action meets the 9       requirements of Rule 23(b)(2), namely “the party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on 10      grounds generally applicable to the class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief or 11      corresponding declaratory relief with respect to the class as a whole.” Plaintiffs challenge—and seek 12      declaratory and injunctive relief from—a systemic policy and practice that forces them to appear in 13      immigration court and face complex adversarial proceedings without legal representation. Id. at 1126
14      (finding that class of non-citizens detained during immigration proceedings met Rule 23(b)(2) 15      criteria because “all class members’ [sic] seek the exact same relief as a matter of statutory or, in the 16      alternative, constitutional right”); see also Parsons v. Ryan, _ F.3d _, 2014 WL 2523682, *21 (9th 17      Cir. 2014) (Rule 23(b)(2) “requirements are unquestionably satisfied when members of a putative
18      class seek uniform injunctive or declaratory relief from policies or practices that are generally
19      applicable to the class as a whole”); Marisol A. ex.rel. Forbes v. Giuliani, 126 F.3d 372, 378 (2d
20      Cir. 1997) (certifying under Rule 23(b)(2) class of children seeking declaratory and injunctive relief
21      from systematic failures in child welfare system). Defendants’ actions in forcing proposed class 22      members to represent themselves result in a denial of due process to all proposed class members and 23      clearly demonstrate that Defendants have acted “on grounds generally applicable to the class,
24
25
26
27
28

1 thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief with respect to
2 the class as a whole.” Hence, the requirements of Rule 23(b)(2) are met.

3 IV. CONCLUSION

4 Plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court grant this Motion and enter the attached order
5 certifying this challenge to Defendants’ policy as a class action and defining the class as set forth in 6 Section I, supra.

7
8
9 Dated this 9th day of July, 2014.

10 Respectfully submitted,

11
12 s/ Matt Adams

13 Matt Adams, WSBA No. 28287
14 Glenda M. Aldana Madrid, WSBA 46987
15 NORTHWEST IMMIGRANT
16 RIGHTS PROJECT
17 615 2nd Avenue, Suite 400
18 Seattle, WA 98104
19 (206) 957-8611
20 (206) 587-4025 (fax)

21 Ahilan Arulanantham, Cal. State Bar. No. 237841 (pro hac vice motion pending)
22 ACLU IMMIGRANTS’ RIGHTS PROJECT
23 ACLU OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
24 1313 West 8th Street
25 Los Angeles, CA 90017
26 (213) 977-5211
27 (213) 417-2211 (fax)

28 Cecillia Wang, Cal. State Bar. No. 187782 (pro hac vice motion pending)
Stephen Kang, Cal. State Bar No. 292280 (pro hac vice motion pending)
ACLU IMMIGRANTS’ RIGHTS PROJECT
39 Drumm Street
San Francisco, CA 94111
(415) 343-0770
(415) 343-0950 (fax)

1 Carmen Iguina, Cal. State Bar No. 277369 (pro hac vice motion pending)
2 ACLU OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
3 1313 West 8th Street
4 Los Angeles, CA 90017
5 (213) 977-5211
6 (213) 417-2211 (fax)

7 Kristen Jackson, Cal. State Bar. No. 226255 (pro hac vice motion pending)
8 Talia Inlender, Cal. State Bar No. 253796 (pro hac vice motion pending)
9 PUBLIC COUNSEL
610 South Ardmere Avenue
Los Angeles, CA 90005
(213) 385-2977
(213) 385-9089 (fax)

10 Beth Werlin, D.C. Bar No. 1006954 (pro hac vice motion pending)
11 Melissa Crow, D.C. Bar No. 453487 (pro hac vice motion pending)
12 AMERICAN IMMIGRATION COUNCIL
13 1331 G Street NW, Suite 200
14 Washington, DC 20005
202-507-7500
202-742-5619 (fax)

15 Theodore Angelis, WSBA No. 30300
16 Todd Nunn, WSBA No. 23267
17 K&L GATES
18 925 Fourth Avenue, Suite 2900
19 Seattle, WA 98104
20 (206) 623-7580
21 (206) 623-7022 (fax)

22 Sarah Dunne, WSBA No. 34869
23 ACLU OF WASHINGTON FOUNDATION
24 901 Fifth Avenue, Suite 630
25 Seattle, WA 98164
26 (206) 624-2184

27 Counsel for Plaintiffs-Petitioners

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

J.E.F.M., a minor, by and through his Next Friend, Bob Ekblad, et al.,

Plaintiffs-Petitioners,

v.

Eric H. HOLDER, Attorney General, United States, et al.,

Defendants-Respondents.

Case No. _____

EXHIBITS IN SUPPORT OF MOTION
FOR CLASS CERTIFICATION

Exhibit	Exhibit Name	Page Number
A	Notice to Appear for J.E.F.M.	26
B	Notice to Appear for J.F.M.	29
C	Notice to Appear for D.G.F.M.	33
D	Notice to Appear for F.L.B.	37
E	Detainer for G.D.S.	40
F	Notice to Appear for M.A.M.	42
G	Notice to Appear for S.R.I.C.	45
H	Notice to Appear for G.M.G.C.	48

1	I	Declaration of Kristin Macleod-Ball	51
2	J	Declaration of Eve Stotland	64
3	K	Declaration of Ana Herrera	70
4	L	Declaration of Daniel J. Sharp	75
5	M	Declaration of Mirta Laura Contreras	81
6	N	Declaration of Matt Adams	86
7	O	Declaration of Ahilan Arulanantham	90
8	P	Declaration of Beth Werlin	100
9	Q	Declaration of Kristen Jackson	104
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28			